PROMISES FULFILLED

During Easter, we listen again to the promises that Jesus made to the community of disciples on the eve of his Passion. This means we must change the verbs in the future tense to the present tense. What Jesus promised has already been fulfilled in his death and resurrection, even if we must await its full and definitive fulfillment. However, we can already accomplish the greatest works of faith, walking the path that is Jesus, abiding in his truth, welcoming the gift of his life. By fixing our gaze on him, we are granted the gift of contemplating the face of the Father, whom he reveals to us, and above all, in him we can already dwell with God, in his love and in his peace, there where the Risen One has prepared a place for us. As Saint Peter teaches us, in the crucified and living Jesus we recognize the stone rejected and chosen by the Father, and on his foundation we can now build not only the Christian community, but a personal life capable of that free and selfless service that the community of Jerusalem entrusts to Stephen and his companions, and of spreading the word of God, so that the number of believers may grow.

PROMESSE COMPIUTE

Nel tempo pasquale riascoltiamo le promesse che Gesù ha fatto alla comunità dei discepoli nell'imminenza della sua Passione. Questo significa che dobbiamo cambiare i verbi al futuro in verbi al presente. Quanto Gesù ha promesso si è già realizzato nella sua morte e risurrezione, anche se dobbiamo attendere il suo pieno e definitivo compimento. Possiamo tuttavia già compiere le opere più grandi della fede, percorrendo la via che è Gesù, dimorando nella sua verità, accogliendo il dono della sua vita. Fissando lo sguardo su di lui ci è donato di contemplare il volto del Padre, che egli ci rivela, e soprattutto in lui possiamo già dimorare presso Dio, nel suo amore e nella sua pace, là dove il Risorto ci ha preparato un posto. Come ci insegna san Pietro, in Gesù crocifisso e vivente riconosciamo la pietra scartata e scelta dal Padre, e sul suo fondamento possiamo sin da ora edificare non solo la comunità cristiana, ma una vita personale capace di quel servizio gratuito e disinteressato che la comunità di Gerusalemme affida a Stefano e ai suoi compagni, e di diffondere la parola di Dio, così che cresca il numero dei credenti.
